Never one to do things by half measure, he became the Founding Chairman of the Sir Henry Royce Foundation and an active member of the Rolls-Royce Owners Club.David owned and restored many important Rolls-Royce and Bentleys over the years, showing them with real pride at concours events and enjoyed participating in club activities around Australia. Notable examples included the Twenty, Phantom II, Derby Bentley and Silver Dawn but it was the 40/50 Silver Ghost he will be most remembered for, famous cars like the "Eilyah" and "Nareeb" (named after the grand Toorak mansions of their original keepers) gracing the Jones garage over the years. David was so well respected among the Rolls Royce community, it was he who Rolls Royceentrusted to collect the prized 1907 Silver Ghost, AX210 for the Melbourne Motor Show in 1986.David's love of fine automobiles led to an interest in Italian thoroughbreds, including a pre-war Alfa Romeo 6C 1750 and a brace of fine Ferraris, a 330 GTC and of course the 246 GT Dino offered here. An active and energetic member of the local Ferrari club, his cars were a familiar sight at concours and club runs.David's role at Tattersalls was instrumental in introducing historic cars to a wider public at the Australian Grand Prix and their backing has been vitally important in the growth of the Victorian historic racing scene. David was also a former executive director of the Victorian Chamber of Commerce, Melbourne City Councilorand was the Chairman of the MoombaFestival for nine years.Carefully assembled and lovingly preserved over a lifetime, we are honoured to be entrusted with the sale of this wonderful Melburnian's fabulous collection of memorabilia, along with his beloved MG TForand Ferrari Dino. Looking around the treasure trove inside his inner-city garage, David's passion and appreciation for all things automotive shines through and Donington Auctions are proud to offer this very special collection.

1	1972 Ferrari 246 GT Dino Coupe 1972 Ferrari 246 GT Dino Coupe• Factory right-hand drive example of Ferrari's first mid-engined production car• One of only two originally finished in Verde Medio/beige leather combination• Offered from long-term ownership and part of a well-known collection• Extensively refurbished and well-maintained exampleChassis No. 05556Engine No. 135CS.0000010626MODEL HISTORY:One of Pininfarina's most beautiful designs, the Dino's evolution can be traced back to a series of racing prototypes powered by V6 engines in the late 1950s, named as a tribute to Enzo Ferrari's son Alfredo who proposed the configuration as an alternative to the existing V12s before his life was cruelly cut short by disease in 1956.Following a series of styling exercises penned by Pininfarina in the mid-1960s, the mid-engined Dino finally became a production reality with the launch of the 206 GT at the 1967 Turin motor show. In a break with tradition for the Maranello firm, the 206 was the first road-going Ferrari with the engine mounted behind the driver and Pininfarina added some novel touches to the Dino's styling, particularly the flying buttresses and side air-intakes that would become signature design cues on subsequent models.Devoid of Ferrari badges, the first 150 or so Dinos wore bodywork fashioned by the artisans at Scaglietti entirely in aluminium and a 2-litre motor before the revised 246 model was released in early 1969. The enlarged V6 was housed in a slightly longer wheelbase with steel external panels (doors and lids were still alloy), while detail changes included bolt-on cast alloy wheels from Cromodora in place of the earlier knock-ons.Transversely mounted, the 65-degree V6 employed twin overhead camshafts per bank, fed by triple twin-choke Weber 40 DCN carburettors and delivered 195 horsepower to the rear wheels through a five-speed transaxle. Derived from contemporary racing practice, the suspension setup consisted of wishbones, coil springs and anti-roll bars at either end, while ventilated disc brakes all round ensured excellent stopping power. Thank's the V6's compact design, there was even room for a decent boot.Contemporary road tests praised the Dino's impeccable road manners, strong performance and, above all, it's sublime beauty. While the Ferrari's nearest rival, Porsche's 911S, may have been marginally quicker, the driving experience could hardly be more different - even at low speeds the Dino creates an incredible mechanical symphony and the view through the curved windscreen is something to savour.The relatively affordable price tag made the Dino a sales success and Ferrari built a total of just under 2,500 246 GTs in berlinetta configuration (of which 488 were in right-hand drive configuration) along with a further 1274 targa-topped GTS versions by the time production came to a halt in 1974. Recognised as a fully fledged classic Ferrari today, Dino prices have been steadily rising as collectors come to appreciate the timeless styling and incredible character these Italian masterpieces afford their fortunate owners.VEHICLE HISTORY:Factory records indicate chassis 05556 was completed on December 21, 1972 placing it right in the middle of the ultimate E series production run. Ordered by Colonel Ronnie Hoare's Maranello Concessionaires of Egham, the Dino was built to right-hand drive configuration for the UK market and finished in the rare combination of Verde Medio (a light metallic green colour with paint code 106-G-29) with contrasting beige leather upholstery (code VM3234). Considering the relatively large numbers of 246 GTs built, it's remarkable to note only two cars left the factory in this exact colour combination, the other being chassis 04734 (also built for the UK market) and - like all cars destined for Great Britain - was optioned with electric windows. Although the original owner's name isn't recorded, we understand that 05556 was retailed through well-known Nottingham dealer Sytners, who still exist today.The Ferrari's subsequent history is straightforward enough: the car was owned by Nigel Hunt of London in the 1970s before being sold to Australia, passing to David Warren of Gosford on the NSW Central Coast in 1978. Repainted in the current shade of red in 1982, the Dino joined the Late David Jones' outstanding collection in Melbourne in May 1987 and spent the better part of four decades in the hands of this arch enthusiast.To bring the Dino up to his usual high standards, the Late Owner had Melbourne specialists Perfect Reflections undertake considerable cosmetic restoration work (including a respray in acrylic lacquer) and they recall the body was largely rust free at the time. A further refresh of the Dino's cosmetics (including paint and interior refurbishment) was carried out in 2014 and the car presents in lovely condition almost a decade on. Maintained by Ferrari specialists over the years regardless of expense, the car has been freshly serviced in preparation for sale and we can attest it drives as any well-sorted Dino should.Well-known in Melbourne Ferrari circles, the 246 was a familiar sight at club events over the years, also participating at the Formula One Historic Demonstration at Albert Park and several Grand Prix rallies amongst other events. Jones was also invited to display the Dino at the prestigious Motorclassica event a few years ago.An extensive receipt file covering the present ownership accompanies the car, detailing all work carried out from 1987 to date, along with the books and tools. Showing around 41,000 miles at the time of purchase, service records indicate the current reading of just over 61,000 miles on

3	1955 MG TF 1500 Roadster 1955 MG TF 1500Classic British sports car Triple concours winner Late production car Lovely example Chassis number: TF9734Engine number: XPEG2745Registration number: CH4234 (Victoria)MODEL HISTORY:The last of MG's traditional square-rigged sports cars, the TF was originally a stopgap, designed to fill the breach until the new MGA entered production.But for many enthusiasts, the TF it is the best of the T-series MGs, mixing traditional pre-war styling cues like the fold-flat windscreen with subtly modernised lines including a raked radiator shell and integrated headlamps into reprofiled, more flowing front guards.The TF's cockpit was updated with a new three octagonal dial dashboard and more supportive seats, while the unpopular pressed-steel disc wheels of the TD were ditched in favour of traditional wires.Mechanically, the TF was essentially a carryover from its predecessor, the rugged 1250cc engine benefitting from valve and carburettor improvements. The XPAG motor provided willing performance from its 57 horsepower and there was adequate stopping power from Lockheed hydraulic brakes.A revised 1500cc XPEG-engined model was announced mid-way through the TF's production run, the vast majority of which were exported to the United States where GIs returning from Europe eagerly snapped them up for America's burgeoning sports car scene.T-series ownership is a rewarding experience, with a thriving national club scene offering plenty of shows and rallies around the country each year, and a strong network of local specialists for parts supply and servicing.VEHICLE HISTORY:Given just 3400 MG TFs were built with the 1500 XPEG engine, this model was a relative rarity even when new especially compared to its predecessor TD model, of which nearly 30,000 were produced.The TF was the last of the line of T-series MGs and the most refined to live with, not to mention the most powerful when its 1500cc engine was introduced in mid-1954.Our lovely, restored example heralds from 1955, indeed from around March of that year, barely a month before production of the TF ended altogether.Believed to have been purchased from a fellow MG Car Club enthusiast, in 1998, this TF underwent a full restoration to concours condition more than 20 years ago. Its late owner, a well-known Rolls Royce and Ferrari enthusiast and collector, had MGs his entire life and, indeed, his very first car was a TF.Prior to its purchase, in September 1996, this TF was fitted with a correct XPEG 1500 engine to replace the earlier (and incorrect) XPAG 1250 (TC/TD model) engine.Beautifully finished in stylish burgundy with a taupe roof, side curtains and interior, the TF continues to present very nicely throughout today. It sits on silver-painted wire wheels, with a set of driving light mounted up front, and is now indicating 20,389 miles.A winner at MG concours events in 2002, 2003 and 2004, and used enthusiastically on club runs, the TF's additional claim to fame is that it ferried Aussie Formula 1 driver Mark Webber around the Albert Park Grand Prix circuit for the driver's parade at the Australian Grand Prix, circa 2005.Regularly serviced by specialists, work just carried out has included a thorough brake system service including new rear wheel brake cylinders, master cylinder disassembly and clean, and new fluid and system bleed. The handbrake and lever assembly were also repaired.New tie rod end boots were also fitted, along with a grease and lube of the front suspension, tailshaft and pedal linkages.This 1955 MG TF 1500 is now being sold with a history file that includes receipts, photos and various other paperwork. There's also a fitted car cover.MG's T-series sports car remains a staple of the classic car scene, and this TF is a prime example of why they are so popular. It's ideal for the MG enthusiast looking to buy a special example of the TF with everything done; equally it would make a great entry into the world of classic cars, for the first time enthusiast.Previously on Victorian club registration, this 1955 MG TF 1500 is being sold here unregistered.
